2.11. Carousel (index.html)

A carousel is an interactive element that displays a series of content items, typically images, in a rotating fashion. It allows users to browse through the content items by clicking on navigation buttons or swiping on the content itself.

This example uses the Bootstrap framework, which provides pre-designed carousel styles and functionality. The `carousel-indicators` element creates the clickable "indicators" at the bottom of the carousel, and the `carousel-inner` element contains the content items. Each content item is a `div` element with the class `carousel-item`, which can contain an image and optional caption. The `carousel-control-prev` and `carousel-control-next` elements create the "previous" and "next" buttons.
